

FATE OF BILL NEAR AT HAND

Philippine Bill Will Be Voted On Within The Next Twenty-Four Hours.

House.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

Washington, Jan. 15.—The republican insurgents against the Philippine tariff bill met their first defeat this afternoon on two amendments by William Alden Smith of Michigan. The proposition to make the new tariff on sugar and tobacco sixty instead of twenty-five per cent of the Dingley schedules and to strike out the provision for absolute free trade after April, 1911, was defeated by a vote of 197 to 73. The amendment proposing self government to the Filipinos "when they shall have demonstrated their fitness for self government" was lost.

The Bill's Fate
It is conceded that the fate of the Philippine tariff bill in the house of representatives will be decided today or Wednesday. The general debate on the measure, which has been in progress since Jan. 4, was concluded yesterday, the closing speeches being significant because of demands for tariff revision made by Republicans.

DEMANDS THAT DEPEW GIVE HIS RESIGNATION AT ONCE

This Is The Sentiment Expressed By Brackets
But Was Defeated
By The Senate.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

Albany, Jan. 15.—At a meeting of the senate today Senator Brackets' resolution demanding the resignation of Senator Depew was the first order of business. Senator Brackets did not mince matters in attacking Depew for his connection with the insurance scandals. He said any senator present ought to blush for shame at the representation of the state in the United States senate by either of the present senators. He said he would support any resolution requesting Senator Platt to resign and insisted that Depew's services during the time he received twenty thousand dollars a year were only such as he was in duty bound to render as directed by the company. After one of the severest arraignments ever heard in a New York legislature the Brackets resolution was defeated by a vote of 34 to 1. The democrats remained passive, declaring the responsibility for Depew rested upon the party which sent him.

BLOCKS CANAL WORK.

Officials Assert That Southern Pacific Road Is Acting Ugly.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Charges by Secretary Taft and Chief Engineer Stevens of the isthmian canal commission that the Southern Pacific railway is deliberately blocking the work on the Panama canal were made before the deficiency sub-committee of the House committee on appropriations. The freight congestion on the isthmus. It was declared, was brought about by the officials of the railroad in the interest of the Pacific Mail Steamship company, which is controlled by the Southern Pacific. The secretary of war and the chief engineer said they believed that the apparent motive for this course on the part of the steamship company was to hinder materials intended for the canal delivered at Colon by the steamships operated by the government from New York that shipments would be necessary over the lines of the Pacific Mail from San Francisco. That the blockade had had this effect was asserted by Chief Engineer Stevens, who said that several cargoes had been shipped via San Francisco and over the Pacific Mail line for this very reason. Other shipments will go this way unless an end can be made to the blockade. Since the abrogation of the freight agreement between the Panama railroad and the steamship company the latter has been dilatory in calling for San Francisco freight on the west side of the isthmus. It was declared that

RATE MAKING BODY DECLARED AGAINST BY BOARD OF TRADE

National Convention Admits Evils of Discrimination Does Not Favor Proposed Remedies.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—Delegates representing commercial organizations throughout the country are assembled in this city and every train is bringing additional delegates. They have come to attend the annual convention of the National Board of Trade, which begins its sessions here today. The convention will open with an informal reception, and meeting this evening, while the first regular business session will be held tomorrow. The convention promises to be unusually interesting owing to the large number of important matters which will come up for consideration in the meetings. One of the most important subjects to be considered is the question concerning the government control of railroad rates. Numerous resolutions on the subject of railroad rate control in accordance with the suggestions of the committee on interstate commerce have been introduced and will be discussed in the convention. One of the strongest is by the New York Produce Exchange. It declares that it would be detrimental to the commercial interests of the country to invest any government commission with the power to make the rates, and strongly recommends other legislation to correct the evils of rate discriminations, etc. Other resolutions on the same subject will also be considered, which rather favor government control of some form of the power to make railroad rates. Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Scranton and Washington have offered resolutions on the subject of ship subsidies and development of our merchant marine. All favor some measure or measures that would have a tendency to encourage the development of our merchant marine, although some of the resolutions do not expressly advocate the payment of subsidies. All of them point out the great importance of an increase of American shipping for the commercial development of the country. Other resolutions which will come up for discussion refer to the consular service, postal affairs, the federal control of interstate insurance, tariff and reciprocity, river and harbor improvements, international arbitration, national currency, territorial possessions, the abolishment of the tax on alcohol for industrial purposes, changes in the national bankruptcy laws and other subjects of equal importance.

New York.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]
New York, Jan. 16, 4:10 p. m.—Marshall Field is dead.
The end came at 4:08 p. m.

MARSHALL FIELD.
Marshall Field, the merchant prince of Chicago, was born in 1835 in Conway, Mass., and began life as a dry goods clerk in Pittsfield at the age of fifteen. In 1856 he located in Chicago, where he rose steadily, till he is now worth $50,000,000, and the head of a firm whose sales amount to $30,000,000 a year.

New York, Jan. 16.—At nine-fifteen the physicians issued a field bulletin saying: "The condition is a little worse this morning. The evidence of some extension of the disease is marked. His condition, while critical, is not hopeless." At one this afternoon the physicians gave out the following bulletin: "Mr. Field has grown worse since this morning. His condition has become very grave."

PRISONER ASSAULTS DEPUTY IN OPEN COURT

Man on Trial for Murdering Policeman Has Narrow Escape from Death at Hands of Spectators.

Joplin, Mo., Jan. 16.—Estill P. Butler, who is being tried here on the charge of murdering Claude Price, a policeman, in this city, in December, 1904, was attacked by 200 spectators in the court room after he had brutally assaulted a deputy sheriff and would have been killed had it not been for the intervention of officers. After the night session of the trial had adjourned Butler called Ed Hansford, a deputy sheriff, and when Hansford approached Butler, who was smiling and holding out his hand, the deputy a terrific blow on the head which sent him to the floor. Every man in the room who had witnessed Butler's treachery rushed forward to attack him. Butler's mother slipped an open knife to her son, but he was overpowered before he could use it. He was knocked down and badly beaten before the officers finally rescued him and hurried him to jail. Butler, who has figured in many sensational escapades, is known as "Foot and a Half Butler."

Its Dominion.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 16.—The Chinese of this city are in a state of great excitement over the expected arrival of the special commission sent by the imperial Chinese government, to make an exhaustive study of American political, military, naval, educational and industrial methods. The steamer upon which the commission sailed is due here today. The commission stopped on its way across the Pacific at Honolulu for a few days and was treated with the distinction due to the prominent character of the dignitaries composing the commission. It consists of two Chinese officials of high rank, who are accompanied by a numerous and brilliant suite of secretaries, assistants and attendants. Everything is ready here for the reception of the commission and every facility will be offered the members to begin their studies at once.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NEW YORK BAR

Choate to Be Elected President—
Ivins Will Discuss Ballot Reform—Other Speeches.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Representative Charles E. Littlefield of Maine will be the principal speaker before the annual meeting of the New York State Bar association, which will open in the assembly chamber this evening. Mr. Littlefield will speak on the subject, "The Three Departments of Government and Their Relations to Each Other." President Richard L. Hand will speak on the subject of "The Judicial Power." Other addresses which will be delivered during the two days of the meeting will be: "The Massachusetts Ballot System," by Richard H. Dana of Boston; "The Disregard of Law" by Judge Alphonso T. Clearwater of Kingston; "Should the Grand Jury System Be Abolished?" by George Lawyer of Albany; "Fraudulent Conveyances," by Frederick S. Wall of New York; "Combination of Contracts on Sale of Personal Property," by Edward S. Rapaport of New York; "The Great Forward Movement for Uniform Divorce Laws" by Clinton B. Gibbs of Buffalo. The subject of ballot reform will be discussed by William M. Ivins, the defeated republican candidate for mayor of New York. It is generally conceded that Joseph H. Choate, the former United States ambassador to Great Britain, will be elected president of the bar association.

MORE GAINS BY THE LIBERALS

Election In London Proves A Surprise To The Political World Of England.

JAMES KEIR HARDEE IS A LEADER

Labor Party Adds To Membership And Is Expected To Be Important Factor Under Experienced Captain.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

London, Jan. 16.—The liberal landslide Monday swept the unionists out of London and continued in the provinces. Out of seventy-six contests the liberals and laborites together secured sixty-two seats. The liberal gains show the surprising total of forty-two, while the unionists gained only one seat, that of Hastings. The composition of the new parliament up to the present is as follows: Liberals, 95; unionists, 31; laborites, 17; nationalists, 18; socialists, 1.

The total liberal gains number sixty-four, the gain made by the laborites being classed among the liberals. Twenty-one London districts voted Monday. Out of these hitherto unionist strongholds the unionists only succeeded in securing five seats.

Three members of the new ministry were returned by strong majorities—Herbert John Gladstone, secretary for home affairs, President of the Board of Education Birrell and James Bryce, chief secretary for Ireland. The attorney general, Sir J. Lawson Walton, also received a large majority.

A number of unopposed returns were made, the most notable being Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, in the Stirling district; Timothy M. Healy, Irish nationalist, North Louth, and Joseph Devlin, Irish nationalist, North Kilkenny.

Six more nationalists, including William H. Redmond, East Clare, and Sir Thomas Esmond, North Wexford, were returned unopposed.

Gerald Balfour is Defeated.

Two former cabinet officers went down before the storm of liberal sentiment. Gerald Balfour, who was president of the local government in the Balfour cabinet, was defeated at Leeds by a majority of 1,069, and Walter Hume Long, former chief secretary for Ireland, lost his seat for South Bristol, while Augustus Birrell, president of the board of education, defeated the unionist candidate at North Bristol.

Lord Hugh Cecil, leader of the conservative free traders, was defeated at Greenwich, and T. Gibson Bowles, a unionist free trader, lost at Kings Lynn, both being opposed by Chamberlainites.

Aside from the overwhelming gains by the liberals throughout the country, the immense majorities secured in the turnover are causes of surprise to both sides.

Labor Party Makes Gains.

The labor candidates are showing remarkable strength, the total gains of the labor party being seven, not including one socialist, W. Thorne, who at Westham defeated the unionist candidate, Sir J. G. Nutting, by a majority of 5,000.

The independent labor party thus already has secured more seats than it held in the previous house of commons.

The laborites won under the dual flag of "liberal and labor," and were found ranged with the liberals on all labor questions. The early successes of the laborites, foreshadowing the presence in the next parliament of a united labor body of considerable strength, form one of the main surprises of the elections thus far. The labor party can be depended upon to take an entirely independent course under the leadership of James Keir Hardee, chairman of the independent labor party and socialist and laborite member for Merthyr-Tydfil. So all the older factions will have to reckon with the laborites hereafter.

GLOOMY PROSPECTS FOR PEACE IN COAL FIELDS

A Great Strike Of Anthracite And Possibly Bituminous Miners May Come
This Spring.

[Special by Scripps-McRae.]

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 16.—The question of war or peace in the coal fields will largely depend upon the result of the seventeenth annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which opened here this morning at Tomlinson hall. The convention was called to order by President John Mitchell, who delivered an address, explaining the present situation, and gave a clear statement of the decisions of the Anthracite Miners' convention at Shamokin. The rest of the morning session was devoted to the appointment of committees and other routine business. There is a strong feeling of determination among the delegates to the convention, based upon a full realization of the present situation and of the crisis in case it should be impossible to bring about an agreement between the miners and the operators. All agreements as to wage scales, etc., between miners and operators in the bituminous and anthracite coal fields expire on March 31. While it cannot be said that the conditions in the bituminous fields are ideal, it must be admitted that they are by no means as serious as in the anthracite fields. The miners in the bituminous fields are not confronted with as serious problems as those in the anthracite fields, owing to the demands recently formulated by the anthracite miners at the Shamokin convention. The miners in the bituminous coal mines will undoubtedly make certain demands beyond the conditions granted by the operators under the present agreement, but it is believed that an agreement will quickly be reached without a great struggle. It is different with the anthracite miners. Their demands are of such a radical nature that an acceptance of their terms is scarcely expected. All that can reasonably be hoped for is that the operators, after mature deliberation, will consent to submitting the matter to arbitration. Even that they will not willingly do. The principal obstacle in the way of a settlement is the demand of the miners for recognition of their union. They fear that such recognition would seriously cripple them in handling their mining properties, as it would practically destroy any opportunity of dealing with their men individually. A compromise is scarcely to be expected, as the miners fully understand the vital importance of the demanded recognition, without which, they feel, no permanent improvement of their condition can be expected. The demands of the anthracite miners will be the first matter to be considered by the convention and there is but little doubt that the convention will strongly endorse those demands. President Mitchell and his trusty lieutenants, District Presidents Fahy, Nicholls and Dettry, who are conducting the campaign of the anthracite miners, are confident that the convention will back up the anthracite miners. At the same time they will do their utmost to hold down the radical elements among the delegates and keep them from committing any indiscretion, which would precipitate a war between the miners and operators without hope of a final adjustment of the existing differences.

TRUCK RAISING A PAYING VENTURE

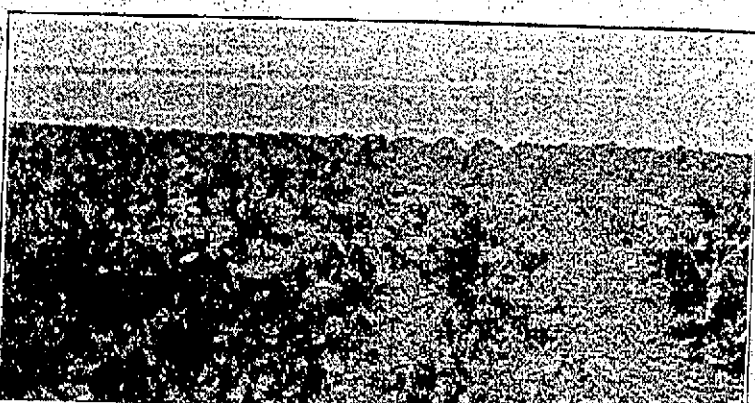

TEXAS LANDS NEAR ALICE RAISE WONDERFUL CROPS EACH YEAR.

LETTER FROM MR. C. H. LEE

Interesting Description of the Land, Climate and Crops That Are Grown.

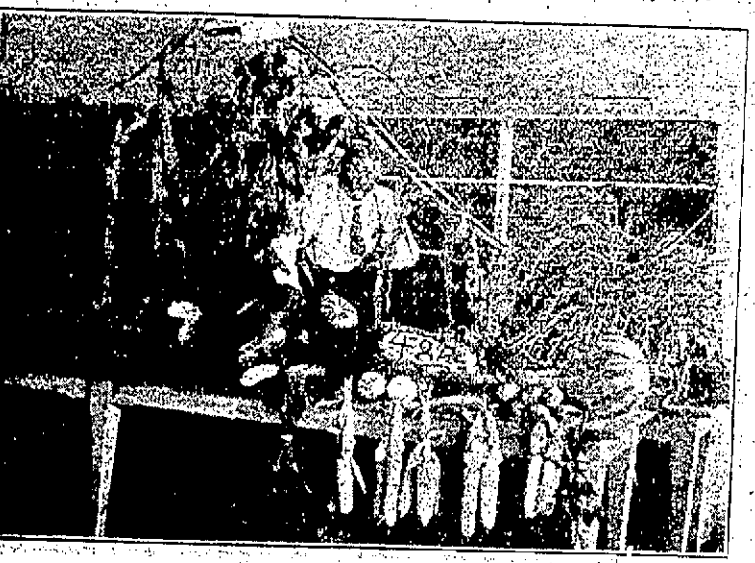

Historically, Texas is one of the most interesting states in the Union. Six different flags have waved over it since 1541. It has belonged respectively to France, Spain, Mexico, the Republic of Texas, the United States, the Confederate States of America, and again is under the Stars and Stripes. San Antonio is the oldest European settlement in the southwestern portion of the United States, having been founded in 1692. There is no state in the Union nor any territory in the world that shows such a diversity of soil and climate as does Texas. Nothing that is grown on the soil of New England or the tropical climate of Florida can not be reproduced in this state. To those who have lost interest in the north or have become dissatisfied with the cold and rigid climate and who desire to make money quickly, Texas offers unparalleled opportunities. They are looking for and have consented to write a series of letters and answer all questions addressed to him to the best of his ability.

So many questions have been asked

Alice is in Neches county, the largest of the southwestern coast counties. Lying as it does near the coast of the Gulf of Mexico its climate is tempered in the summer months by the cool gulf winds, and in the winter is warmed by these same breezes. The summer temperature is rarely over ninety-five degrees and the average temperature of the winter months is about sixty-five. Some winters have passed without any frost, although a slight frost is the rule most years. The air is dry and this section of the state has long been noted as a natural sanitar-

There's a small growth of mesquite timber, but this is easily cleared out at the cost of five dollars an acre and almost pays for itself by the amount of posts and fuel obtained. Help is plentiful and not expensive. I might say right here that truck gardening is the real paying feature of this country. With excellent railroad facilities the products of these small farms are easily shipped to the local Texas markets, and even farther north, and disposed of at large profits. Grapes ripen in June, while in California they do not ripen until August. Three vegetable crops are harvested yearly, fall, winter and spring, bringing fair prices. I have seen farms where as much as $200 was realized from a single acre of cabbage. A farmer makes $100 an acre from this crop easily. Divers-

Tomatoes are one of the most profitable and most satisfactory crops. The yield usually runs from three hundred to four hundred crates per acre at good prices. Cabbage is planted in September and is ready for market in mid-winter; its growth is almost abnormal. Irish potatoes yield from one to two hundred bushels per acre and two crops a year can be grown. Onions, those big lucious kind, known to the trade as Bermudas, are grown by train-load lots in this section of the state. Mark them Texas Bermudas. This is the order of New York jobbers. They're better than the genuine and sell better. Cauliflower is also another product that demands a good price. Four to eight hundred dollars an acre is not a bad price when you come to think of it. Canebrakes, like tomatoes, must be rushed to the market, the price depending on the time of arrival, and the profits run from one to two hundred dollars an acre.

STATE BUMPS INTO SERVANT PROBLEM

Few Applicants for Such Positions Took Civil Service Exams, and More Tests Must Be Held.

In the general competitive examination held throughout the state on January 6th a sufficient number of applicants applied for positions as clerks, bookkeepers and factory inspectors to justify the belief that it will not be necessary to hold another examination for these positions for some time. It is probable that another competitive examination for the above position may not be held during the next twelve months. The number of applicants in some counties for the position of game warden was insufficient and within the next two months another examination may be held for certain counties. The demand for attendants in hospitals for the insane and feeble minded is such as to justify the belief that it will be necessary to hold another examination soon.

Requests are being received by the Civil Service commission from authorities in control of county asylums for names of suitable applicants. Thus far the commission has received an insufficient number of applications for positions as dining-room girls and women to do various kinds of housework in the school for dependent children at Sparta, School for the Blind at Janesville, State Reformatory, and in the institutions for the insane and feeble minded. These positions pay from $12 to $20 a month.

Engineer Charles E. Burkett has resigned his place on the Janesville-Davis Junction way freight and will take the Beloit switch-engine. Applications for the position will be received up to the twenty-third, and the run will be awarded to the oldest man asking.

THRONG OF DANCERS AT ASSEMBLY HALL

Participated in the Imperial Band Benefit Last Evening—Festivities at Their Height Till Early Morning.

While rain alternated with snow and high winds blew last evening, nearly three hundred people, oblivious of the war of the elements, made full surrender to the alluring music discoursed by the Imperial band and orchestra at Assembly hall and danced until long after the hour hand had marked the passing of night. The ballroom was decorated with festoons of Southern smilax which radiated from an immense cluster of electric lights hanging like a bell from the center of the ceiling, and the band and orchestra members took their places on a large platform in the western side of the hall.

The affair was given for the purpose of raising funds with which to purchase new uniforms for the band and a sang little sum was realized, the use of the hall having been donated by the Messrs. Hayes.

THE MARY ANN LEAGUE

The Mary Ann League is failing to pieces.

MR. LENROOT

It appears that Mr. Lenroot follows the teacher closely and works by under ground methods.

CONGRESSMAN BABCOCK

It would appear that Congressman Babcock stands to the front in Washington and if his plans go through he may be more than a national figure.

LONDON COMPLAINS

London complains of the weather saying that when it is supposed to be winter, spring showers flourish. Janesville appears to be afflicted the same way.

GERMANIA AND HEROLD

The Germania and Herold of Milwaukee have combined thus enlarging the scope of both papers. Mr. Brumder, the editor of the new combination now seeks to annex the Free Press.

OLD BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

Old Benjamin Franklin was born two hundred years ago. His birthday was recently observed with due prominence and more papers than poor old Ben ever dreamed of printed long stories of his great prominence.

THE BELLOIT NEWS

The Beloit News claims to have discovered why the Gazette does not approve of its conduct. The Brohead, independent also makes a discovery. Both are wrong however. No fault is found with either publication. Merely methods that is all, gentlemen.

THE SUPREME BENCH

Candidates for the supreme bench are springing up numerous. Louis Hanitch of Superior has not the field alone by any means. Circuit Judge O'Neill of Neillsville has formally admitted his own aspirations and W. H. Timlin, J. G. Flanders and J. H. Roemer of Milwaukee are all possibilities. The Milwaukee Sentinel observes that the cream city is not represented on the supreme bench, which reflection leads one to wonder just where it locates Mr. Justice Dodge geographically. And an advocate of Mr. O'Neill's candidacy declares that "the northwest part of the state is entitled to representation on the bench," apparently forgetful of the fact that Mr. Justice Marshall still retains Chippewa Falls as his legal residence.

"POLITICAL DOPE"

"Political Dope" is the label given in a column of interesting and spicy gossip in the Evening Wisconsin. An installment appears every day, and George F. Grassie is the guilty man. This item was there Wednesday evening.

THERE ARE 100 MEMBERS

There are 100 members of the lower house of the legislature. One of them is a candidate for governor, and that leaves 99. Four of them are social democrats, and that leaves 95. Eleven of them are democrats, and that leaves 84 republicans. Twenty-three of these are stalwarts, and that leaves 61 half-breeds. Forty of these have signed the Lenroot call, and that leaves 21 half-breeds who have refused to endorse the La Follette candidate. This includes some of the most prominent men in the assembly—Bohri, Brennan, Carpenter, Curtin, Dinsdale, Eldridge, Frid, Hagerty, Hagen, Huber, Hurlburt, Irvine, Jerdee, LeRoy, Marquardt, Nelson, Pruhn, Slight, Turner, Wehrweis and Winch.

AND IT HAS BEEN STATED

And it has been stated that a lot of those who did sign, did so on the condition that if future developments were such as to make it advisable for them to support some other candidate, they were to be at liberty to do so. For instance, George Beedle, of Waupaca county, signed the call, but if Mr. Halton, of New London, becomes a candidate for the nomination, Mr. Beedle will give him his hearty support.

THE LENROOT LEAGUE

The Lenroot league was not able to secure the signature of Mr. Huber, the Dane county assemblyman who has been "always right." That looks as though the La Follette movement was waning in Dane county.

ADVERTISING

How much of your time and nervous force are devoted to "making mountains out of mole-hills?"

It is one of the worst of employments—and the prime temperamental defect of the race.

In business the tendency is all in the direction of mountain-building, with material which is, in some cases, scant for a sizable mole-hill.

The "scares" merchant sees the mole-hills of "additional competition,"

"increased expenses," "over stocks" and "lost customers" loom large as the Alps—while adequate advertising would rob them of all terrors, and keep them "under his heel."

The property-owner sees, in a broken lease, a rapidly-bulging mole-hill of loss and trouble—while a classified ad. would turn the incident to his profit—by finding a better tenant at once.

The widow who keeps boarders loses a group of them unexpectedly, cutting her income in half, and expanding the mole-hill to a sinister-visaged mountain of fret, while a quick use of the want columns would fill the empty chairs and clear the atmosphere of worry.

The man with a plan, with an invention, with a business opening—without money to "push it"—his mountain looks as though it could never have been a mole-hill. And a business opportunity advertisement, which—like Faith—can "move a mountain" could find a man who could find the money to set things in motion.

Look over the classified ads, and you will see how printers' ink is used by "all kinds and conditions of men" to dissolve and remove trouble-mountains—to turn daily perplexities into content, even to profit—to resolve imaginary mountains into the mole-hills from which they were builded.

THE REIGN OF LAW

President Roosevelt in the course of his trip through the south last October took occasion to challenge a half-way palliation of lynching made by a southern governor. Welcoming the president to Arkansas Governor Jeff Davis, of that state, after swaggering more or less about the 'superlative virtues of the people he officially represented,' broadly intimated that it was their own concern if in punishing certain crimes they occasionally resorted to mob violence. The president felt that he could not let such a quasi-defence of lynch law go unrebuked, and he won the respect and support of his hearers by declaring that "to avenge one hideous crime by another is to reduce the avenger to the 'bestial level' and by personally reminding the governor that 'you and I and all others in authority' owe it to the people to drive out the reproach and the menace of lynch law in the United States."

The Little Rock audience sided with the president and against the governor. This was a hopeful sign of the growth of a healthier sentiment throughout the south. Signs of such a growth, we are glad to note, are multiplying. The other day "The Birmingham Ledger" called attention to the fact that there had not been a single lynching in Alabama in 1905. "That is to say," it explained, "there has been no crime committed so outrageous that the people resumed their power to punish summarily." This rather dubious commentary moves "The State," of Columbia, S. C., a representative and progressive southern newspaper, to ask by what warrant the people of Alabama or of any other commonwealth can "resume their power to punish summarily." To admit this retrocession of power, said "The State," was to admit the failure of organized government. For it substituted for the orderly processes of justice the impulse of "a mob of from ten to a hundred persons, usually whiskey soaked, passion inflamed, and the most ignorant in the community. Is it to the superior wisdom of such as these that the commonwealth should bow?"

It is highly encouraging to find in a southern newspaper so clear and logical a presentation of the case of order against lawlessness. Many southerners hold that lynching may be justified by a certain state of facts. But "The State" points out that it is practically impossible to regulate the activities of infuriated mobs. If lynching is to be condoned in one case, it must be condoned in all cases. "If there is virtue in lawlessness, when the law is just and strong and where the escape of the guilty is impossible, when is there virtue in law?" So, "The State" argues, mobs and mob violence must go; for "the law allows no dispensation for even the momentary rule of anarchy." These utterances deserve reproduction. They indicate that southern opinion is gradually awakening to a true appreciation of the evils of lynch law and is setting its face against the delusion that to punish one odious crime it is necessary to commit another equally odious.

PRESS COMMENT.

Such is New York Provincialism.

Washington Times: The New York editor never gets over his surprise that papers outside of that center of of-culture and altruism have local news to print.

Sledge For A Gnat.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Still in regard to Secretary Taft's letter on Pout, Bigelow, the secretary need not have taken a sledge hammer to smash a gnat with.

Propose Union For Footballers.

La Crosse Chronicle: The professional football players had better consider the subject of a union. It looks as though they might soon be out of work.

Is It As Bad As That?

Chicago Tribune: Senator La Follette may seem to be doing nothing, but it is a safe guess that he is adding daily to his supply of pent-up carbolic acid gas.

Haste To Be Discouraged.

Exchange: The next time the Hon. Poutney Bigelow visits Panama, he should remain there at least a day and a half. No man can learn everything about a strange country in twenty-eight hours.

Unconscious Humors.

Rockland, Me., Star: A Rockland schoolboy's composition on Whittier handed in the other day, reached the following conclusion: "He was never married. He hated slavery."

Merry Game Goes On.

Green Bay Gazette: The departure of La Follette from the state has not served to state either the energy or ingenuity of Milwaukee newspaper men in working up new political combinations of every degree of impossibility.

Pigment Men Behind The Boost.

Beloit Free Press: Young man, you will realize some day that the folks who talk so much about the joy of painting the town red are directly or indirectly concerned in the manufacture and sale of the pigment used in such decorative efforts.

And There Is A Difference.

Superior Telegram: Cheer, up boys—Dr. Gladde says he can remember no year when it was as easy for a man in public life to do right as it will be in 1906. But possibly the doctor means there has been no previous year in which doing the opposite was so risky.

Seems Too Sympathetic.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The Sheboygan Journal thinks it is no wonder that chorus girls cannot afford to wear more clothes, considering the fact they receive only about seventy-five cents per night. At the same time The Journal-man should not permit his sympathies to run away with him.

Treading On Many Toes.

Marquette Eagle-Star: The president has settled the post-office squabble at Milwaukee, selecting a man, D. C. Owen, who was not the candidate of either of the congressmen from that district. President Roosevelt has a way of settling difficulties that is popular with the people but that treads on the toes of many politicians.

Report Probably Isn't True.

Evening Wisconsin: If the report be true that Mr. Eckersall has retired from university athletics in the face of fresh evidence of professionalism, it can be said that he not only beat football teams with his nimble legs, but also the game itself, for it was toying with professionalism in anything-to-win campaigns that has brought football into disrepute.

Not Much To Boast About.

Exchange: "I can't see," said Mrs. Nurtich, "why Mrs. Dallington should put it on so thick because her ancestors came over in the Mayflower. I've been reading about it, and as far as I've been able to find out it was a little bit of a boat that didn't have electric lights or any other conveniences worth mentioning, and my husband says he doesn't suppose the whole crowd of pilgrims that came over on her could have raised enough money to buy a box at a grand opera performance."

Bryan To Be A Factor.

Boston Herald: That William J. Bryan will return from the tour of the world a potent political force, and one to be reckoned with in the presidential election of 1908, is a fact which the other leaders fully realize. His absence from the country had caused his name to drop from the news, until his appearance in the Philippines brought him again to mind, and in a very suggestive way. From the meager cablegrams it appears, first that he is making a very careful study of "world politics" and conditions, and second, that he is conducting himself in a manner to avoid even carping criticism.

Tracing Ancestry in Kansas.

(Pittsburg Headlight.)

The Lanyon family of this city traces its ancestry back to William the Conqueror of England.

(Independence Tribune.)

You will have to take a back seat. The Stanton of Independence have traced their ancestors back 1,400 years to the year 500 A. D. or 500 years before Bill the Conqueror.

(Eldorado Republican.)

A family in this town traces its ancestry directly back to the Egyptian god of war, who was on deck 6,000 years before Pharaoh of the Exodus.

(Skytown Scrapper.)

These little incidents are, of course, interesting, but they pale into insignificance when it is remarked that there are several families in Beloit, Wis., who trace their ancestry back to Adam, and then some.

Hair Arrangement of 1906.

Exchange: The American beauty of 1906 will be like the beauty of last year, but she will differ in certain of her peculiarities and in all of her eccentricities. Her most pronounced difference will be seen in the new way in which she will wear her hair. She will revive the net, and she will put it on over the wide bun which stretches across the back of her head. She will wear a bang net, just such a net as they wore thirty years ago, and she will draw it over her front waves to keep them in place. She will build her pompadour sky-high and, when it is all constructed, she will take a comb and rake a part in the front of it, plastering the part down with her fingers until she has a really and truly parted pompadour. But the most essential difference will be seen in the tiara and in the hair decoration, for the beauty of 1906 has torn off her crown and has erected in place of it a tall comb, or she has set on top of her head a flowering plant. She will wear a wreath of roses, a little button wreath which, woven together and laid around her head, will make a charming ornament. Sometimes she will cast aside this wreath, and, taking two big silk roses, she will wire them together and plant them back of her ear.

Rebuke To Wholesale Abuse.

Pond Lac Reporter: The situation in which the Milwaukee Free Press finds itself is very unpleasant. It took great ease some time since in accusing E. L. Philipp, president of the Union Refrigerator company, of receiving unlawful rebates from railroad companies and now finds that its charges were baseless. State Railroad Commissioner Thomas has issued a statement in which he declares that the report upon which The Free Press based its charges were not correct and that it was not Mr. Philipp at all who received a $25,000 rebate suit against The Free Press several years ago, and it looks very much as if he would have little trouble in proving that he was basely slandered. The situation contains a lesson for many newspapers and individuals in Wisconsin. Mr. Philipp is not the only person who has been haled before the court of public opinion by would-be reformers. It is not improbable that many of the people accused are as innocent as Mr. Philipp. It has become the fashion in Wisconsin during the past few years for disgruntled politicians and editors to sling accusations right and left at everybody who does not agree with them. Reform has been a cloak for more trickery than it has sought to abolish.

"Don't cough without holding a handkerchief over your hand over your mouth."

And always it is:

"Keep in the sunshine as much as possible."

"Keep your windows open, winter and summer, night and day."

"Sit out of doors all you can. If you have no other place to sit than the pavement, sit on the pavement in front of your house."

And a most important precaution in administering the out-of-door treatment:

"Breathe always through the nose, never through the mouth."—New York World.

FRANKLIN ON MARRIAGE.

There are three faithful friends, an old wife, an old dog and ready money.

MR. JOHN FITZGERALD OF 262-Prospect Avenue.

Mr. Fitzgerald has for many years been a well-known and highly esteemed resident of Janesville, and is a man whose statements weigh sixteen ounces to the pound.

He would be the last man to exaggerate a matter in the least. The other day he ran across a friend on the street who was suffering with his teeth and he said, "You go to Dr. Richards, over Hall & Sayles' jewelry store, and he will fix your teeth up right. His prices won't ruin you either." He further said that Dr. Richards had put in for him six or eight gold crowns some four years ago, and they were as good today as ever and doing the best of service.

The friend took a hike for the said dentist, got relieved and came down stairs and met Mr. Fitzgerald in front of the cigar store. He shook hands with him and thanked him for sending him to the right man. He hadn't been hurt a particle.

This is only one of hundreds of such incidents, so general is becoming the knowledge that if you get the right dentist you don't need to be hurt.

COUNTY BOARD IS HEARING A TALK

BY MR. COUDRY OF CHICAGO, AND SIMON SMITH

RELATIVE TO CONTRACTS

Question of Changing Bids for Recent Furnishings Awarded Eastern Firm Discussed.

The county board is in session for its January work. It convened at two o'clock and almost immediately Mr. H. Van Slyke, representing the Western Seaman's Friend Assn., gave a short talk and collected $3.50 from the members. Mr. Coudry, representing the Library Bureau of Chicago, then asked permission to speak and took up the subject of the bids for the furnishing of supplies for the new vault in the courthouse.

F. R. Coudry's Contention

Mr. F. R. Coudry, who represents the Library Bureau of Chicago, is quite positive in his statement regarding the changing of the bids of the Art Metal Construction Company after they were presented to the building committee for consideration.

Mr. Coudry states that he is certain that the bid was altered from $1,375 to $1,500 after his bid of $1,520 had been opened. On this point there appears to have been a divergence of opinion and Mr. Coudry's statement may be questioned, as one of the members of the committee states that the Jamestown concern had made a part of their bid an appendix of the Art Metal Construction Company.

DIAMOND ROOSTER IS ON EXHIBITION

Bird Which Swallowed Two Hundred Dollar Solitaire Creates Interest in Poultry Show.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 16.—One of the most interesting attractions at the Cincinnati Poultry and Pet Stock exhibition, which was opened here today, is a rooster which promises through litigation to become as famous in history as the celebrated calf in the Jones county calf case.

The rooster in question was exhibited in Minneapolis last year. At the conclusion of the exhibition he was placed in a crate for shipment. It belonged to an exhibitor in the state of New York. While the crate was with others in the exhibition hall, a Kansas exhibitor accidentally struck his hand against the crate with such force that a solitaire diamond valued at $200 broke from the setting. The ring and fell into the crate. The rooster quickly picked up the gem and swallowed it. Then there was great excitement. The owner of the diamond demanded that the rooster should be killed, but the owner objected to the killing of the rooster, maintaining that it was not his fault that the animal had swallowed the diamond and that the CHAPTER XV.

I stared at the blank stones, but they returned no sign from their unavailing grayness. The silence began to speak in that gloomy place. Recovering myself, I put down the lantern and considered. First I put the key in my pocket, a definite precaution which was to influence strangely the history of this narrative. It was not conceivable that any one could have opened the heavy door when it was locked, yet the prisoner was gone. "It is gone," said I aloud in order to reassure myself, "the must needs have gone by some hole." That was incontrovertible. I decided, too, that the means of escape must be within the dungeon. Once more I inspected the huge oak door and shook my head. Was there any flaw in the wood? Perchance there was a secret spring in a panel? I went over the surface carefully, but found nothing.

"Very well," said I, "I will untie this or be hanged for a felon," and I set to work upon the walls. Inch by inch I passed the masonry under my scrutiny, but made no discovery. "I will go over it again," I declared desperately, and resumed my work from the beginning. I had not reached a point very far from the door on this second round of investigation when my glance slid off at a venture and almost mechanically rested upon the treasure chests. Something unfamiliar in their appearance vaguely persisted in my thoughts. I left off fumbling with the wall and stood gazing at them. They took my eyes with interest and, crossing the room, I shed the light upon the caskets, broken the pieces under the flaking lid. One, two, three—they stood exactly as—no, that was the point. They had been moved!

With a new zest I examined the floor, and, sure enough, one of these chests had been pulled out from the wall, as far as its own width. I peeped over it, illuminating the space beyond. The slab of stone which the box had covered was like the other things that made the floor of the dungeon. I leaned lower, and, sitting crossways on the chest, pushed the slab with my foot. It clanked only to the kick of my heel, but what was even more amazing to me, it seemed to shudder and tremble beneath me. Fully aroused to action, I flung myself over and alighted with both feet hard upon the flooring. In another moment I was tipped forward and felt myself falling precipitately upon my face. Catching at the chest with one hand, I saved myself, but in the effort the lantern fell from my hand and went out.

Slowly I groped in the darkness and struck a match, relighting the candle. Then I turned to the slab of stone.

"It lay open, displaced, one end protruding upward, and, as I saw, had twisted on some kind of axle. Below was disclosed a great mouth of darkness.

"Come," said I to myself, "I think I know where friend Hood is, and this begins to get interesting."

I felt in my pocket where my revolver lay safely, and, seizing the candle, plunged into the evil-looking hole. A stairway of stone ran downward, but very steeply, and I had the utmost difficulty in preventing myself from pitching forward against the rough masonry of the opposite wall. The walls brushed me upon either side as I descended, so narrow was the tunnel. Down, down I went, until presently I reached a sort of landing, which broadened into a little irregular chamber. Here a ray of light caught my eye, and I followed it till I happened upon a small door in the wall. A huge key was in the lock, but the bolt was not turned, and by wrenching hard I forced the door open. I now looked down upon the waters of the moat, in which my tiny flame danced in the growing darkness.

After a little consideration I saw where I was. This must be, a Sally port, giving access to the fosse. Indeed, the water lapped the lowermost step, upon which I stood. Was it by the tunnel that Hood had escaped? It seemed certain, and, if so, there was nothing for it but to pocket my chagrin, go back and communicate my melancholy news to my friends. Retracing my steps, I shut the door and proceeded to rekindle the stairway, but in the act of doing so I paused, for the lantern flashing on the obscure corners revealed to me a second flight of steps leading still downward from this level. Without hesitation and moved by some excitement I abandoned my first intention and plunged down this new well.

The second flight led downward even farther than the first, and, must, I reckoned, have brought me under the foundations of the castle. At the bottom I was in a square, damp hole, and before me stretched a tunnel the height of a tall man and very black and dirty. The thought of entering upon that mysterious and horrid gallery gave me a momentary pause, but, dissipating my forebodings, I marched forward and was soon buried in the bowels of the earth.

The slab of stone lay open.

It was not long that Hood had escaped? It seemed certain, and, if so, there was nothing for it but to pocket my chagrin, go back and communicate my melancholy news to my friends. evidently not been used for a gallery these many years. Indeed, it bore the plain marks of recent habitation, and it came across me that maybe this had been the hiding place of the Greek sailors.

"Into this cell the Greeks thrust me and, locking the door behind them, disappeared, leaving me to my own reflections. That, those were not cheerful I need not assure you. Although I was but partially awakened to my misfortune, I had no difficulty in seeing whether it suited. Hood, as I now perceived, had discovered the secret gallery and had made his escape by that and not by the sally port. But why was he lingering about the entrance to the passage? And how came he in company with his allies? I had not contemplated this problem for five minutes ere the secret of my capture dawned on me, and I will confess, fairly turned my stomach. Through the gallery lay the one road to the treasure, and Hood and I were the only two people in the drama who knew that. My seizure meant, then, that the way was now clear for him and his enterprise. The treasure of the Myrians was at his mercy.

In these desperate considerations I spun out the better part of an hour, at the end of which time the key created suddenly in the door, and Sercombe entered, bearing a heavy lamp. This he set down upon the rude bench table and turned to me, seating himself in a chair and disposing himself with comfort.

"I regret, Mr. Greatorox," said he snarling, and pulling at his cigar, with his hat off the back of his head, "I regret that I am somewhat late to my appointment with you. It was to have been 9 o'clock, I fancy."

Now I recalled what, to say the truth, I had completely forgotten in the adventure which I had experienced—that I had myself named such an hour to receive the capitulation of the captain. It maddened me to remember the fact and my triumphant diplomacy of the afternoon in the face of my dismal failure and this bland and sprightly creature. But I was not to take a rebuff with my ears down, and so I spoke up as calmly and as politely as himself.

"You are right," said I. "Nine o'clock it was. But, like you, I have been unavoidably delayed. So please don't apologize."

"A smile lit up his face, and he was always best when he smiled—and his eyes twinkled."

"I begin to see, Mr. Greatorox," he said, "how it is that you have come so near winning this campaign."

"I have no doubt I shall win it yet," I returned.

"No doubt," he replied cordially. "But forgive me, Mr. Greatorox, I see you have no refreshments here, and I am sure you are in need of them. It was unpardonable of Hood. So saying, he rose and went to the door, shouting some order to a man below, whom, I judged, I must consider my sentry. Presently, and before the captain returned, hooded his seat. Hood himself entered, bearing in his hands a tray containing a bottle of whisky, a can of water and some glasses. He cast an eye of scrutiny on Sercombe, who lolled once more in his chair, but he said nothing and retired to the door. Sercombe filled two glasses.

"Allow me, Mr. Greatorox," he said and puffed for some minutes in silence. Indeed, it was I who first resumed the conversation.

"I presume, Captain Sercombe," I said, "that you have come to tell me that you do not accept my offer."

"Precisely," he owed, taking his cigar from his mouth. "That is exactly the position, Mr. Greatorox. I don't know how you guessed it, but there it is. I do not feel justified, in consideration of my relations with Mr. Hood, in accepting your proposals."

"Then," I said blithely, but keeping up the farce, "I see no reason for our continuing this interview, and, as I am somewhat tired, if you will excuse me."

"I would not trespass upon you in the slightest," he interrupted. "But I had an idea that perhaps we might arrive at a compromise." I said nothing, for I had not the faintest notion of what he was driving at.

"You are aware," he continued in his pleasant voice, "that there is an access to the dungeon in which, justifiably or otherwise—I express no opinion—you confined our host."

I bowed and sipped my whisky and water.

"You are also aware," he went on, "that now you, the only other person who has knowledge of that private road, are, let us say, enjoying the hospitality of the Woodman, the treasure chests are not likely to remain long where they are."

He waited on my answer as if something anxious, but I merely nodded and watched him. Captain Sercombe from his comfortable attitude bent his red brows at me. "May I ask you, Mr. Greatorox," he said quite coolly, "if you happen to have locked the door of the dungeon?"

For answer and without giving the matter a thought I produced the key, which, as I have already narrated, I had put in my pocket.

Sercombe's eye lightened. He rose and went to the door, opening it and glancing into the darkness. Then he returned and drew his chair nearer to mine.

"You made me a proposition this afternoon," he said earnestly.

"I did," said I, "which I now beg to retract."

"It was not good enough," he went on, paying no attention to my sarcasm, "not nearly good enough. But what do you say if I make one to you now?"

I shrugged my shoulders. "I am at your mercy," I said.

"I envy you your powers of ease," he said. "I am pretty good, but I admit you beat me. But come, I am making you a proposition. What do you say?"

"I have already said it."

"I see I will get no more change out of you," he said soberly. "But I know a man to trust when I see him. That has been my safeguard, Mr. Greatorox. And I know a man to distrust, though sometimes it is unavoidable." He broke off. "Your friends don't know where you went tonight?" he asked suddenly.

"Why do you ask?" I said.

"If the dungeon door is locked it is impossible that they can get into it. But if your friends had the key," he went on, growing very earnest, "what would happen? I imagine that they would open the door, find the bird down and perhaps the entrance to the secret passage disclosed."

This began to interest me. What was the rascal's purpose?

"Well?" I put in.

He lowered his voice, which conveyed a certain effect of fear to my mind.

"In which case the treasure would remain in the possession of the castle."

"You speak like a book of Enchid," I returned, after a pause. "And now, captain, let me ask in my turn what proposition are you making to me?"

He considered for a moment. "There are three of you," he said. "But I confess I cannot reckon my friend Montgomerie. Let us say two, then. I am willing to go halves with you. In which case, as you will see, there is a quarter for yourself."

"You would betray your associates," I said dryly.

"Pardon me," said the captain, "we are not here to pass criticisms on morals. And, if it comes to that, what are we all? I see no pluck prick between us. I do not invite your conclusions on my conduct. I have the honor to make you a proposal."

The rascal leaned back in his chair and watched me with a curious air of satisfaction. Indeed, his complacency was well grounded, and I could not but admit to myself that he was making me a handsome offer. His distrust or his fear of Hood was stronger than his greed, and it was to that we owed this unexpected intercession which fate had turned clean against us. Here was I, a prisoner, and with no possibility of escape. The treasure lay at the mercy of these vagabonds, and even at this moment the pieces might be slipping through Hood's loving fingers. Assuredly I should be a fool, I thought, to refuse Sercombe's compromise. He must certainly have made the proposal in good faith, for all I was invited to do was to surrender the key, a key which could be of no possible use to him now that the subterranean entrance to the dungeon had been discovered. I withdrew it from my pocket. He nodded contentedly.

"That is all I ask," he said.

"And I?" I queried.

"You shall be at liberty at the earliest opportunity I can find," he returned.

"Observe, Mr. Greatorox," that I am taking a great risk. I am depending upon your word."

"If I give it," I replied, "you may depend upon it. You will warn my companions?" I asked.

"I will see that they pay a visit to their prisoner," said he, "and I reckon they will want little warning after that."

"You may take the key," said I after a pause. But at that moment a slight sound as of soft feet upon the creaking stairway reached us. Sercombe withdrew visibly and looked uneasily at the door.

"It is better that I should leave you now," he said hurriedly. "We can settle this tomorrow morning." And, showing clear signs of discomposure, he left the barn.

As for me, I sat with the key in my hand, considering. I thought I could put a name on the owner of those steps.

Sympathy for Jews.

Washington, Jan. 16.—A meeting to express the sentiment of the citizens of Washington regarding the outrages and atrocities perpetrated on the Jews in Russia will be held in the Belasco theater next Sunday evening. The speakers will include prominent members of Congress and others in public life.

National Grange Committee.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The executive committee of the National Grange, composed of Gov. Bell of Vermont, ex-Gov. Batchelor of New Hampshire, E. B. Norris and Aaron Jones of Indiana, called on the president in the interest of bills now pending to remove the internal revenue tax from denatured alcohol and to establish a parcels-post service.

Officers Lose Mileage.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Secretary Taft learned that the committee on appropriations of the house was dubious as to the propriety of the allowance of mileage to four army officers, who accompanied him to the Philippines. He immediately asked Col. Edwards: "Who authorized it?"

Col. Edwards replied: "Well, I want it seen to at once that those officers return the money and that he be paid back to the treasury," was the secretary's instant direction.

Negro Banker Declines Office.

Washington, Jan. 16.—J. C. Napier, the negro lawyer and banker of Nashville, who recently was offered the position of United States consul at Bahia, Brazil, called on the president and thanked him for the proposed appointment but declined it.

HOW THE BIBLE CAME TO BE WRITTEN

taunted rally. When Saul dies he returns to become king, and under his rule the boundaries are enlarged as they are never afterwards to be.

Songs Attributed to David.

When in after years the kingdom does not fare so well, the people pin their hopes on some new anointed one or Messiah (the Greek word for Christ) who was to come from his line. Because David was distinguished as a singer all the psalms of the race were gathered about his name, even the ones composed long after he had gone, just as laws never written by Moses were identified with his name because he was the great law-giver. Had David had adequate successors they would have built up a great military nation. Solomon was his son and was able to live in great estate because his father had been a conqueror. The place which the kingdom had come to occupy is shown by the fact that he married the daughter of the great Pharaoh. He was wise in the manner of shap, shrewd sayings—not as we estimate wisdom, and so the proverbs for many generations were gathered about his name. The taxes were so heavy that when he died the people threatened to revolt. His son refused to lighten these taxes and ten of the tribes, afterwards known as Israel, seceded from his rule while the two in the south, known as Judah, kept this son as king. The ten tribes kept their nationality only until about 721 B. C. when they were conquered and carried as captives into Assyria. A few were left behind but those ultimately were amalgamated with the Assyrians, left to live beside them. The southern tribes lived in a rocky country and they lived there, until 586 when Jerusalem was conquered by the armies of Babylon. The books of Kings and Chronicles tell how Babylon overcame the forces of Judah. For fifty years this Babylonian captivity lasted and many of the psalms and prophecies of the Bible were written during that time.

Again Rise to Power.

Then, gradually, a certain class of Hebrews began to rise into prominence as prophets. At first they may have been more ignorant men afflicted with a sort of frenzy, but the outgrowth was a line of great and noble men who became advisers of the king. The conquests of the Persians, the return to Palestine and revival of the race under Persian rule, the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem. The books of Ezra and Nehemiah belong to this period. Persia ruled over Palestine for 200 years and then came the conquests of Alexander the Great who made all civilization Greek. When he died the empire was divided and the families of the Maccabees rose into prominence. The Roman Catholic Bible has these two books of the Maccabees, while the other has not. The speaker closed with a description of the Roman conquest of 63 and the rule of Herod, a descendant of the Edomites from Esau whom the Hebrew race had hated all down the centuries. It was during these days of hatred when men were angry and were clenching their daggers that Christ came. The above is only the interest outline of Prof. Blissell's interesting lecture.

LIFE IN WASHINGTON

BOTH SOCIAL AND OFFICIAL IS DESCRIBED IN OUR NEW STORY

The Man on the Box

By HAROLD MacGRATH

Author of "The Grey Cloak," "The Puppet-Crown."

It is an unusually clever story in which a young army officer, a retired colonel and his pretty daughter and a Russian spy are the leading characters. The kind of a story that has snap, action and interest in every line; a story written for American readers.

IT WILL BEGIN IN THIS PAPER WITHIN A SHORT TIME. WATCH FOR IT.

LIVES DEARER THAN OUR VERY OWN

How many lives dearer to us than our very own have been placed in needless jeopardy by failure to provide against and forestall the great suffering which too frequently accompanies and follows the bearing of children? That we would do anything within our power to obviate the possibility of such an happening is too patent to admit of question; therefore—mark well this fact—a Liniment.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

by name, has been devised whose function it is to prepare in advance the muscles and tissues intimately associated with parturition.

This liniment is for external application. By its use the parts are relaxed and enabled to withstand not only the actual strain brought to bear on them during accouchement, but also to rally from this ordeal and speedily regain their normal proportions and tonicity. It is not irritating to the most sensitive surfaces, and is applicable to all cases. It is not enough to call it Mother's Friend—it is the friend of the whole family. 50c, all druggists. Book "Motherhood" free.
